FARIGO HERE.

Italian Regie Contractor Visit
The Tobacco District.

Change to be Made In Supplying
One of The Largest Foreign Demands For Leaf.

If the report be true that the Italian government has adopted trust methods to buy its supply of dark tobacco, the Italian contract will not be represented hereafter on its boards.

Mr. Farigo, the representative of the Italian government is making a tour of the markets of the dark district, and it is said upon good authority is leaving behind him an organization by counties, by which the regie tobacco will be bought from the farmers themselves.

He is accompanied by Mr. Dunnington, of Farmville, Va., who is to represent the trust in Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

They were at Clarksville last week, in this city this week and left Wednesday for Mayfield, to fix the Western counties. The plan is said to be to have a county agent in each county, who will divide the counties into districts and appoint a canvasser for each district. No agent will be allowed to invade another agent's territory. The tobacco bought will be prized and shipped to New York direct. The Italian government will thus be enabled to do away with its brokers and will no longer be a bidder upon the markets, unless the agents fail to secure enough tobacco by the other method.

This is the startling news that has come to the local tobacco men from their representatives who have obtained the information from persons unable to keep a secret. The plans are all being laid with great secrecy, and it is not yet known whether the Italian government is operating the trust itself, or acting in conjunction with a New York syndicate that proposes to supply the whole regie demand. In either case, there will be a revolution in supplying one of the largest foreign contracts. The warehousemen will be affected in two ways.

A large part of the tobacco will be diverted from the local markets, and one of the heaviest buyers will cease to be a bidder on the boards.

If the plan works, it is believed an attempt will be made to control the Spanish, French, German and Austrian contracts in the same way.

MRS. GRIFFIN DEAD.

Pious Christian Lady Passes
Away at Lafayette.

Lafayette, Ky., Sept. 4.—Mrs. Murry Griffin, wife of W. T. Griffin of this place, died this morning about 1 o'clock of bronchitis. She had been in feeble health some time, and her death was not unexpected. She was 53 years of age, and leaves an aged husband, who is in feeble health, and five children, besides many relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

She was an excellent Christian lady, a member of the M. E. church South, and will be greatly missed by her church and especially her pastor.

Mr. J. A. Draper, of Draper Bros., wears the honors on the production of clover hay and clover seed crop. He made 175 tons of fine hay and 120 bushels of clover seed from eighty acres of land. Can any other Christian county farmer beat this? If so, let us hear from him.

Mr. Holt R. Prince, the popular drummer, is a papa for the first time. The new arrival is a girl, born Monday.

BALDHEADED CLUB

Col. Dave Tandy Fined For Laughing At Col. Claggett.

President Cooper Stops a Discussion of the Trial of Admiral Schley.

President Cooper with his customary promptness was on hand at exactly the hour for opening the club Saturday night and lost no time in getting down to business.

Col. Dave Tandy was sitting over behind the cooler reading a newspaper and suddenly disturbed the roll-call by dropping the paper, slapping his leg and laughing loud enough to excite the jealousy of the man who originated the horse-laugh.

President Cooper reproved him sharply and fined him 30 cents for not suppressing his unseemly hilarity.

Col. Tandy said it was an involuntary outburst of uncontrollable merriment. He said he had read in the paper he held in his hand that the officials of the Indiana Industrial School for girls, after much discussion, had invested $80 in mirrors for the girls. Just then Col. Claggett came in and he got to thinking what a smashing of looking glasses there would be if Col. Claggett was a girl in that school and tried to look at himself. The humor of the thing caused him to lose control of himself and he could not help laughing.

President Cooper, after hearing Col. Tandy's excuse, remitted the fine.

"Speaking of Col. Claggett," said Col. Lem McKee, "reminds me of a good one on him. I happened to be out in the country attending church last winter and sat behind Col. Claggett, who was seated under the over-head stove pipe. Pretty soon little particles of soot began to float down and lodge on his head. Col. Claggett, supposing the early flies were having fun with his scalp, began to knock them off and every time he hit one he left a big black spot. People behind him began to giggle and the blacker he painted his ostrich egg the more the spectators laughed. I had to make him move his seat to keep from breaking up the meeting."

Col. Claggett remarked that the story was one of Col. McKee's pipe dreams, for nobody ever heard of Lem's being in a church.

"I see," said Col. Bob Wooldridge, "that they are going to put our fighting friend Schley on trial next week for killing the Spaniards at Santiago."

Col. Bill Bamberger said he thought it was a shame to try a man for sinking a fleet in time of war.

"And the worst of it is," continued Col. Wooldridge, "the main witness for the prosecution is the only man who proved an alibi on the day of the fight, and only got there in time to write a report. If it has come to such a pass that we are to try our heroes for ending the war, we may expect somebody to propose next to fine the government for breach of the peace in declaring war."

The discussion was in danger of drifting into a running conversation all round, when President Cooper called the club to order and hastened the meeting to a close.

OLIVER--OLIVER

Aged Farmer Weds His Young
Trigg County Cousin.

After a Journey of Many Miles
They Met And Flarried.
This Week.

Mr. J. N. H. Oliver, of Mooresville, Washington county, Ky., and Miss Elizabeth Oliver, of near Rockcastle, Trigg county, were married in the county clerk's office in this city by Judge Cansler Tuesday morning.

The parties are cousins and the affair was an elopement.

Mr. Oliver has a sister living near Cobb, whom he visited last summer. Last year he met Miss Oliver and it was a case of love at first sight. The latter is about 60 years old, and on account of the great difference in their ages there was parental objection.

An elopement was arranged and Mr. Oliver drove from his home through the country in a buggy, a distance of about 250 miles, arriving at Rockcastle Monday night. He was met at the gate by the young lady, who immediately got into the vehicle and the two came to this city, where the nuptial knot was tied as above stated. Mr. Oliver and his young bride spent Tuesday at Hotel Vancey, and after driving over the city in the afternoon, went a few miles into the country where they staid all night with acquaintances. They left early Wednesday morning for Mooresville.

This is the aged groom's second marriage. He has three children and several grandchildren.

CARBOLIC ACID

Thrown in Woman's Face By Her Husband.

Charles Ross, a performer with Wallace's circus, threw a vial of carbolic acid in the face of his wife, Mamie Forepaugh, at Decatur, Ind. Mrs. Ross is a daughter of Adam Forepaugh and is a bareback rider with the Wallace show. The acid was thrown while the woman was eating. The fluid covered her face and ran down on her neck and shoulders. Mrs. Ross, luckily, closed her eyes in time to save herself from being blinded, but she will be disfigured for life. Ross threw the acid on account of jealousy. He was immediately arrested and declared he had been waiting for a favorable opportunity to attack his wife for several days. Mrs. Ross was with Wallace's circus when it was in this section last year and was considered one of the best bareback riders in the show business.

CUTTING THE WEED.

Ripe Tobacco Being Housed With a Rush.

Outlook Very Flattering for a Fine
Crop in Christian--Worms Abundant.

Many farmers have begun to cut and house their tobacco and by the middle of the month much of the weed will have been put under shelter.

Although the worms are more numerous than for years the outlook is very flattering for a fine crop in Christian and adjoining counties.

The cool weather during May and June was very unfavorable, and, at the time of setting, the young plants were small and in some localities scarce; this resulted in a smaller acreage than usual. Cut worms and grasshoppers attacked it, doing considerable damage in some sections. A poor start was made and the plants soon began to suffer for rain. The drought became more intense and was not generally broken until the second week in August. Since the drought was broken the improvement has been remarkable.

While much of the weed is ripe there are many fields of very late tobacco that will be in possible danger of frost before they can be housed.

POTATO THIEF.

Special Watchman Fires at a Man
Stealing Vegetables.

The Misses Hopper have been missing vegetables from their garden recently and employed Booth Morris to watch for the thief. About one o'clock yesterday morning Mr. Morris saw a negro man get over the fence with a hoe and sack and began digging sweet potatoes. When called the man broke to run and Morris fired at him and hit him. He yelled with pain, but did not stop and escaped in the darkness. A woman on the outside of the fence also ran. There was blood on the fence the next morning, where the man climbed over.

TOBACCO SALES.

No Change In Quotations From Last Week.

Traffic in the weed this week was confined to private sales and there was no material change in prices of last week. The demand was good and sales made proved satisfactory to all concerned.

Receipts for the week were one hundred per cent, in excess of offerings. The receipts for the year amount to 11,990 hogheads and sales for the same period 10,505 hogheads. There is nothing doing in the loose market at this time.

A QUEST.

Long since, there lived a man reputed wise (Some better things were said of him, some worse).
Who made his life a tireless quest to know
The Why and Wherefore of the universe.

He wandered through solutions intricate,
And old and new philosophers he read;
This one converted, but another gave
And made his faith apostasy instead.

A palace of wisdom first—
But soon he failed to wonder how to-day
Existence was explained
By saying it existed yesterday.

He severed away into the ether pole,
Hypocrites there, and would find
Have found a cause without a prior cause—
But all his years of searching were in vain.

Thus, all his fond illusions turned to dust;
Some things he learned are not revealed
To man;
What advice that he knew the existence of
All creeds religious since the world began?

His life was girt by vain analysis,
And public discussions held in hall
His soul, that wildly danced to overtop
The mystery life offers to us all.

When Age left him twisted, gray and worn,
He felt the barren purpose of his quest,
And longed to quit for his smoking doubts
And live his last, few, trembling days at rest.

But Death had watched him with a cynic's eye—
Had marked his shuffling steps, his slight
Grown dim,
And still standing stood before his chair,
And smiled, half kindly, as he beckoned him.

One passing through a certain field of graves
May find a stone of rathered dates,
Which bears those words, the last philosophy.
Or slip whose life they thus commend—

"Here sleeps the man who sought to question God—
Who struggled with the everlasting Why,
Devised deeply into science, creeds and schools,
And learned this truth—that Man is born to die."

KITTY'S COOL WHITE ROOM

By Carolyn Wells.

"O DEAR," sighed Mrs. Curtis, as she entered the dining-room, where her husband and her daughter were at breakfast one August morning. "I wish the weather would be cooler. What does the paper say, John?"

"There is no prospect of a cool wave," that isn't very encouraging, my dear. I wish I didn't have to go down to the office."

"I wouldn't mind the heat," Mrs. Curtis continued, "but the St. Clairs are coming out from New York to lunch with us, and it is so trying to have company this awful weather."

"Well," said Kitty, philosophically, "we can help it; we'll tell the boys and they won't suffer any more than we do ourselves."

"Well, good-by, dear," said Mr. Curtis, "give my regards to your friends, and if I don't come home to-night it will be because I've melted away. Hello, here comes Tom to move the chairs and to get the beer down cellar and unlock the door so he can get the lawn mower."

Kitty went down the cellar stairs with her hop skip and a jump, and opened the door for Tom. Then she started to go back, but passed for a moment in the cool, damp cellar, and it was then that her bright thought struck her.

She stood still, looking round her, and as her plan grew in magnificence her eyes danced with glee, and she ran upstairs calling:

"Oh, mamma, I've thought of the loveliest scheme for to-day. We can make a parlor down cellar that will be just beautiful."

"O, child, you're crazy. The cellar is damp and dark and Mrs. St. Clair would be mortally afraid of rheumatism and, besides, I don't propose to entertain city company in the cellar."

"But, mamma, I mean to make it all pretty and attractive. Just come down and look at it."

Unwillingly Mrs. Curtis let herself be dragged down by her energetic daughter, and when she felt the cool, moist air, she began to think there were some possibilities in her daughter's plan.

"Now, you go upstairs, mamma, and don't bother or think about this and when it's all done I'll call you."

Then Kitty told Tom of her enterprise and the handy man, who had entered into the spirit of it with great enthusiasm.

The part of the cellar which Kitty proposed to utilize was directly under the parlor and of a good size and shape. It was scrupulously clean, with a hard cement floor and whitewashed brick walls, and had a large bay window.

As a safeguard against rheumatism Tom brought a great pile of old newspapers and laid them, thickly over the floor. Then he spread over the white linen crash that just fitted the parlor floor for dances and secured it by heavy weights in the corners. Then, following Kitty's instructions, and aided by her willing and energetic self, he brought down wicker chairs and tables and the rattan couch from the veranda, which Kitty covered with a large white linen sheet, draping it prettily at the corners and adding several white pillows.

Then she asked Tom to bring down from her own room two large, cool-looking evelings in white frames, and hang them on the cellar walls. Her decorations were two or three pale colored posters representing sea views or mermaids, and here and there a Japanese fan.

The windows were high and small, with iron gratings. These were well arranged with fresh sea curtains of dotted swiss. The ceiling was the worst, for it was of rough, brown rafters, but with a little thought and some trouble it was canopied with four sheets, which added greatly to the white effect. Kitty was striving for. Also an unsightly patch which held up a beam was twisted with white crepe cloth, with sprays of green eucalyptus, and a palm in the green jardiniere was set against it.

On the wicker table she placed some fine, magazine, one or two white bound books, and a glass bowl of white peonies, surrounded with cool, green leaves.

Then, still mindful of Mrs. St. Clair's possible rheumatism, she spread a green and white Japanese rug beneath the most comfortable rocker, and another before the white-draped couch. Finally she stepped into the adjoining room, which was the laundry, to wash her hands, and at once she had another brilliant idea.

Why not lunch in the laundry? The dining-room was so sunny and there could be no discomfort in eating the dainty luncheon mamma had ordered if the guests were to be struck down by the heat.

After a short consultation with the cook, Kitty and Tom went to work again. It was easier this time, for the laundry was plastered and covered with a white cloth, and a sideboard, and the laundry table did very well for four people to eat from, while spotless, shining damask and fresh white flowers quite disguised the lowly piece of furniture. Chairs were brought from the dining-room and a few rugs and decorations were quickly put in place. Then Kitty flew upstairs to dress.

"Wear a white gown, mamma," she said, "and haven't you a white dressing gown?"

When Kitty appeared again, in a white muslin dress with pale green ribbons, she found the newly-arrived guests in her mother's room. "O," exclaimed Mrs. St. Clair, "if it hadn't been anywhere else but here I wouldn't have come. I'm nearly dead. The cars just crawled, and the sun fairly burned through the windows. Ethel could dress more coolly."

"I had to wear blue silk, and I feel as if I should suffocate."

"Won't you lay aside your waist," said Mrs. Curtis, "and wear this."

She handed her a white gown, and Mrs. Curtis, "and wear this."

When the sun set the Steel-Engraving Lady might have been seen again seated beside the open fireplace. Her taper fingers lightly touched the strings of her guitar as she hummed a low lullaby. Once more she heard a step upon the stair, and once again the color mantled her damask cheek, and she murmured: "Reginald." A tall and silent figure came swiftly toward her. He dropped upon one knee, as if to pay due homage to his fair one, and, raising her white hand to his lips, whispered: "My queen, my lady love."

At this moment the Gibson Girl was seated upon a fence, swinging her heavy boots, while an athletic youth beside her busied himself with filling a corn-cob pipe.

"I say, Joe," he said, with friendly accent, "just you hop down and stand in front of me to keep the wind off while I light this pipe."

And the night breeze sprang up and murmured: "Hail the new woman—behold she comes apace! Woman, once man's superior, now his equal."

BLOOD ORANGES.

There is a great demand in Germany for the so-called "Italian blood orange." The popular idea here is that this fruit is colored, not by nature, but by injections of some artificial vegetable dye. To discover the truth or fallacy of this belief, several well-known German chemists have been experimenting, first, to find out from the blood orange itself if its color is due to artificial means, and, secondly, to change the common Italian orange into a blood orange by injections of different kinds of coloring matter.

The experiments, however, have not been attended with success. It was found that no single injection of any solution would color more than one part of the orange, and that if several injections were made, the fruit was likely to decompose very quickly. The theory was then advanced that the coloring was produced by watering the roots of the trees with a blood-red vegetable solution. It is needless to say this experiment was as barren of results as the first.

THE GIBSON GIRL.

She Has Surprised the Sky and Statist Steel-Engraving Lady.

The Steel-Engraving Lady sat by the open casement, upon which rested one slender arm, writes Caroline Ticknor, in the Atlantic. Her drapery sleeve fell back, revealing the alabaster whiteness of her hand and wrist. Her glossy, abundant hair was smoothly drawn over her ears, and she nestled in the coil of her dark locks.

Suddenly a heavy step was heard upon the stair. A slight blush mantled the Steel-Engraving Lady's cheek.

"Can that be Reginald?" she said.

The door flew open, and in the threshold stood the Gibson Girl.

"Excuse me for dropping in upon you," she said, with a slight nod, tossing a golf club down upon the sofa near by. "You see I've been appointed to write a paper on 'Extinct Types,' and I am anxious to scrape acquaintance with you."

The Steel-Engraving Lady bowed a trifle stiffly. "Won't you be seated?" she said, with dignity.

The Gibson Girl dropped into a low chair and crossed one knee over the other; then she proceeded to inspect the room, whistling meanwhile a snatch from the latest comic opera. She wore a short skirt and heavy squared-toe shoes, a mannish collar, cravat and vest, and a broad-brimmed felt hat tipped jauntily upon one side.

She stared quite fixedly at the fair occupant of the apartment, who could with difficulty conceal her evident annoyance.

"Dear me! you are just as slender and ethereal as any of your pictures," she remarked, speculatively. "You need fresh air and exercise; and see the color of my hands and face beside your own."

The Steel-Engraving Lady glanced at her vis-a-vis and shrugged her shoulders.

"When the sun set the Steel-Engraving Lady might have been seen again seated beside the open fireplace. Her taper fingers lightly touched the strings of her guitar as she hummed a low lullaby. A Rare Relic of Antiquity Discovered in New York

"My nerves withstood such a severe shock at the discovery in New York a few days ago of a relic of rare antiquity that I have scarcely yet recovered," said an F street broker, who morning in an uptown resort, as he poured an extra thimbleful of tonic in his glass.

"Live wire?" suggested the man on his left.

"Worse than that," replied the broker. "I was standing on a corner not a thousand miles from Broadway and Forty-second street when I heard the tinkle of what I thought was a bell. It startled me greatly. I looked down the street, and what do you think I saw?"

As the broker bent his elbow his friends took turns guessing.

"Automobile?"

"Bicycle?"

"Sheep?"

"Goats? They say there is fine goat pasture on the rocks near Fifty-ninth street."

"Fire engine?"

"Cows? They drive cattle through the streets over to the First avenue slaughter houses still, I suppose."

"Ambulance bell?"

"Dinner bell? Were the men running?"

"Steamboat bells from her meetings and floated upon a high tide?"

"A bell hung in the fort?"

"The bell of New York?"

"No, you fellows are all wrong," interrupted the broker. "It was a horse street car bell. They have street cars still in New York. I ride on Washington's perfect system of underground trolley cars for three hours when I get back just to neutralize the dark brown mists of antiquity in my mouth. My, but New York is a dead slow town."—Washington Star.

PREPARING FOR SUCCESS.

Many Ebbs and Floods in the Tides of Every Life

If I were called upon to assist in preparing a young man to mind for success in life, I should begin by asking him to forget the Shakespearean aphorism: 'For is as false in metaphor as it is in principle. The tides of the ocean ebb as well as flow; and they do both twice in 24 hours. The man who misses a flood tide does he deliberately sail into the 'yellow,' or indulge in 'miseries.' He simply watches for the next flood. The tide in the affairs of men also ebbs and flows many times during the average lifetime. It follows that, if there is any logical analogy between the two tides, the lesson to be derived is full of hope and not of despair. It teaches that, if, through the mistakes of experience, the first flood tide is missed, the next is equally available.

Having taught a young man to forget the Shakespearean fallacy, I would first labor to impress upon him the true meaning of 'success' in this life. To that end, I should teach him that every child of God has a mission to perform; and that mission is amply discharged if he lives that, when comes the inevitable hour, he can truly say: 'The world is better for my having lived.' This is success in the highest and best sense of the word. It may or may not be accompanied by an accumulation of wealth; for under this title the millionaire may prove a dismal failure, while the humblest man achieves a brilliant success, even though it may consist in 'causing two blades of grass to grow where but one grew before.'

The most successful man that ever lived on earth was the poorest and humblest. He 'had not where to lay his head.'—Dr. Thomson Jay Hudson, in Success.

It may then indicate irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh, and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in such obvious eruption or enlargement swelling. Hood's Sarsaparilla

The best of all medicines for all humors.

A dispute over the division of money raised in the mountain counties to aid in their defense, caused Jim Howard, convicted of the Goebel murder, to attack Caleb Powers, who was also convicted, in the Frankfort jail Wednesday evening. Powers was knocked senseless by a heavy iron bottle and is in a serious condition with a gash four inches long across his forehead, the middle temple artery is severed. The only witness was J. K. Dixon, who had solicited the defense fund. Howard claims Powers cursed him and assumed a threatening attitude. Powers denies this and claims the attack was unprovoked.

PRINCE OF SHOW MEN.

The Robinsons, Sire, Son and Grandson—Their Enterprises.

A Fervent Story of Continued

Success and Expansion Covering Three-Quarters of a Century.

For more than three quarters of a century the name of "John Robinson" has been associated with the tent and traveling amusement enterprises of the United States. From a very humble beginning and small capital the Robinson show has grown to gigantic proportions and its owner is one of the wealthiest men of Ohio.

Since 1824 when "Uncle John,"

then a young man residing in Cincinnati, embarked in the business, down to now,

the name of John Robinson has been in newspaper parlance, appeared at the masthead of widely spread Circular Advance Couriers. John Robinson

("Uncle John") John F. Robinson

("The Governor") and John G.

Robinson ("Little John"), sire, son and grandson have successively been the managers of the greatest shows of their times.

in many cities four performances daily, an unmatched feat in show annals, furnished the thirty thousands under his canvas with free ice water, uniformed waiters supplying the "candy butchers" and lemonade fiends. The public drank ice water from silver goblets and applauded the thoughtful management. It was not a great thing, perhaps, but one of the de- tested show grafts was eliminated and a man or woman could safely drink something in a red hot atmo- sphere without the fear of medical treatment being necessary an hour or so later.

To the Robinson show is to be credited many departures from old traditions and customs. Away back, in 1852, the "bank ring" was introduced by "Uncle John" and to-day it is universally used. This show was the first to use two tents, one for the menagerie and the other for the circus; the first to erect bill boards; the first to "adopt" railroads as a means of transportation; the first to introduce the present system of lighting and the first to have their cages ornamented with heavy carvings, each historically accurate. The first cook tent on a show lot was at the Robinson show. The Robinson show was the first to visit California and return the same season, and it was the first to visit the large western cities with "un- less of glittering splendor." In a word, the Robinsons have been pioneers in many directions just as would be expected of patriotic and brainy Ohio capitalists, who have kept this element of their commonwealth's glory far to the front. And Ohio's citizens have not been slow to recognize this crowning fact, for great crowds invariably throng the huge tents each season as the show makes its triumphal march across and through the Buckeye state. In 1896 Mr. John G. Robinson be- came associated with his father, "the Governor" in the management.

"LITTLE JOHN."

Up to 1896 the third in line was a busy student mastering the details of managerial life, and in 1899, the Diamond anniversary—John G. was invested with the reins of power. The young John, who is affectionately styled "the biggest little man in the circus business to- day," has fairly won his spurs. He seems to thoroughly understand the show business; is an untiring worker; methodical in all his ways; intelligent, alert, watchful, the last to bed and the first up; versatile and genial; readily adapts himself to all circumstances; equally at home, whether doing a turn as a rider in the ring, taking tickets at the door, seeking the comfort and safety of his patrons, or suddenly assuming command of the circus force in preparing for an entertain- ment, or hurriedly moving the show to the train. "Everywhere he is the self-possessed, gentleman, the real manager of a great enterprise. This is an off-hand pen picture of the present manager of the Robin- son shows, an Ohio boy who, it is said, is destined to become the greatest showman of American an- nals. However that may be, Mr. Robin- son goes right along in the happy- bury of a "show life," seeking to keep faith with the public, and rid- ing for the great enterprise the com- mendation of the people, whose good will and esteem is, after all, more to be prized than a "filled treasury." The season of 1900 was one of the greatest in the seventy-six years of the history of the Robinson shows, and it is said that the Gov- ernor—John G.—is immensely proud of the season.

of John H. Down in the cosy home of the Robinsons at Cincinnati is a youngster, John IV., a wee tottler, who is designed to assume charge some day in the future, and "thousands of friends" who know of the sterling worth of the "Uncle John" from "Uncle John" down, heartily hope that this fourth in descent, may be spared to conduct this great amusement enterprise at the beginning of the second quarter of the Twentieth century until, in turn, he shall be succeeded by another of the "royal line" of showmen who have achieved great fame in the tented circles, which grow by magic in the night, and afford to millions joys not to be recounted in cold type. There is nothing on this earth, in amusement annals, to which the mind clings with such longing tenacity as the memories of the first circus, and coupled with this, are the images of the men, living and dead, who brought all these wonders and held us spellbound in a world which does not exist anywhere on this globe outside of a circus tent. Blessings on the men and women who cheer our hearts and let us on our lives the sunshine and the glories of the good old-fashioned circus, three rings and all, since there must be improvements, but thank fortune, the sawdust and the clown and the tiny balloon remain, and they will be in Hopkinsville, Friday, Sept. 13, 1901.

He Owe His Life to the Forethought of a Companion.

While on a camping trip in Webster county, Mr. S. L. Stump, of Norman, Va., had a severe attack of bloody flux. He says, "I firmly believe that I owe my life to the forethought of one of the many who had taken along a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." "I procured a bottle of this remedy before starting home, and it cannot be obtained on hunting, fishing or prospecting trip. Neither can it be obtained while on board the cars or steamship, and at such times and places it is most likely to be needed. The safe way is to have it with you. Thousands of travelers never leave home on a journey without it. For sale by all druggists, and at the same price by mail order." L. & N. R. "EVLYN."

A Lawn Party.

Church Hill, Aug. 30.—On the night of August 29 a merry crowd of young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pierce, of the Church Hill neighborhood. The warm oppressive air gradually turned into a pleasant breeze, in fear of molesting the jolly crowd that had gathered at this beautiful home. The lawn was so decorated as to make an ideal resting place.

Faint lights were flickering here and there, in fact it was a sight not soon forgotten by any one that attended. We were all very sorry to see the hour of departure gradually approaching, but fearing the wee small hours would catch us too far away from home, we, after extending our thanks, slowly drove away, promising ourselves not to forget the evening spent.

MOONLIGHT FETE.

Miss Lula Dickerson Entertains
Bennettstown Young People.

Bennettstown, Ky., Aug. 31.—On Friday evening, August 30th, at this place was given one of the most delightful moonlight picnics ever witnessed in this section. All the beaux and belles of the neighborhood were assembled in the beautiful yard of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Dickerson, near Bennettstown. Although only a spectator I must confess that the neat and tasteful white dresses of country lasses corresponded to their deportment and were beautifully and appropriately emblematic of the virtues that should distinguish country life. The entertainment was given complimentary to Miss Dickerson's visitors, Misses Della Adcock, of Church Hill, and Marie Stamper, of Big Rock, Tenn. Miss Lula, as usual, in her pretty and attractive manner, entertained the crowd beautifully. She was assisted by Miss Lou Sherrill and Mr. Graham Pattillo. Among the numerous persons present time and space will only allow me to mention the following:
